

I automated the TCP Session Hijacking attack by utilizing the sniff function to intercept Telnet packets exchanged between the host and user. The code applies filters to selectively capture packets originating from the server with the specified IP and port. \ The code then constructs a packet using the acquired information and sends it to manipulate and take control of the established connection.

Test.txt is added after

